

OPTION A

Activation of Article 50, conditional on an interim EEA-type agreement

We support the immediate triggering of Article 50 (with or without Parliamentary approval), so long as the UK government commits to propose to Brussels (at the time Article 50 is triggered) an interim EEA (Norway/Swiss-like) UK-EU arrangement to come into force two years after Article 50's activation.

If the above condition is not met, we oppose the activation of Article 50.

Long-term agreement

Using the 'space' created by the Interim EEA-type Agreement (see above), we support negotiations between the UK and the EU leading to a long term agreement regarding the UK-EU relationship, to be approved by the British Parliament elected after Article 50's activation.

OPTION B

Unconditional activation of Article 50

We support the immediate triggering of Article 50 (with or without Parliamentary approval).

Interim and long-term agreement

We support negotiations between the UK and the EU leading to an interim EEA (Norway/Swiss-like) UK-EU arrangement (to come into force two years after Article 50's activation) and, subsequently, to a long-term agreement viz. the UK-EU relationship to be approved by the Parliament elected after Article 50's activation.

OPTION C

Unconditional opposition to activating Article 50

We support a Parliamentary vote against the activation of Article 50, with or without the provision of a second referendum to overturn Brexit.

OPTION D

No position on Article 50 or a interim/long-term agreement

We will work toward bringing together pro-European political forces but do not take a position on the triggering of Article 50, nor on the form that an agreement (interim or long term) between the EU and the UK ought to take.
